Fandom Taboo: We will be running the Fandom Taboo! Game Show, a game show panel where audience members compete in teams to guess terms relating to various fandoms, hobbies, and interests without using any of the terms' associated Taboo! words. Teams will be in groups of 2-4 people and will come up one team at a time to compete in 4 60-second rounds. We will be presenting the game show via screen or projector, with a word bank of over 1000 terms. We made this program ourselves and it contains no copyrighted audio or visuals. The team member giving clues to their teammates will be facing the screen and the teammates guessing will be facing away from the screen. This will require three chairs to be delegated for guessing teammates to face away from the screen. Ideally we will have at least four (three portable) microphones: two for us hosts, one for clue-giver, and one that can be shared by the guessing teammates. The audience should be able to see the screen well so that they may empathize with the clue-giver's struggles and act as enforcers for the rules! Winning and participating teams will get prizes.
